LIFE UNIVERSITY'S DR. MARK KOVACS AN INVITED PRESENTER AT THE PRESTIGIOUS KAROLINSKA INSTITUTE IN SWEDEN

Marietta, Georgia, March 19, 2018 – Dr. Mark Kovacs, the Director of the LIFE Sport Science Institute (LSSI) and Associate Professor in the Department of Sport Health Science at Life University (LIFE), was an invited speaker at Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, Sweden this month. Karolinska Institute is one of the world's foremost and prestigious health and medical universities. It is Sweden's single largest University of medical academic research and offers the country's widest range of medical courses and programs. Since 1901, the Nobel Assembly at Karolinska Institute has selected the Nobel laureates in Physiology or Medicine. Dr. Kovacs was asked to present on some of his research and clinical experience around "Testing, Treating and Training the Overhead Athlete."

"The Karolinska Institute is one of the top Universities in the world and it was a great honor to be invited on campus to present to the esteemed faculty and students," says Dr. Kovacs. "It was also an opportunity for us to build a bridge between the LIFE Sport Science Institute, Life University and one of the top global research and education institutions. We are now working together on a series of collaborative projects that will aid the development of overhead athletes from research to practical/clinical education programming."

Much of the information presented is also available to Life University students and is taught as Part One of the graduate classes focused on Strength & Conditioning in the Department of Sport Health Science.
